Administration Steps Up European Aid Drive

• SPOKESMEN IN CONGRESS TO EXPEDITE PLAN

First Word Of Impending Opposition Comes From Senator Taft

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—Secretary of State Marshall told congress today that there is a complete lack of funds for the necessities of life in Western Europe.

At the same time, Secretary of Commerce Harriman flatly contradicted the assertion of Sen. Taft (R) Ohio, that the American economy cannot stand the emergency foreign aid plan proposed by the administration.

Harriman declared that the interim aid plan will not cause larger pressures on the national economy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—The administration stepped up its drive today for speedy enactment of a 597 million dollar emergency foreign aid program by sending spokesmen to both the house and senate committees on foreign affairs.

Secretary of Commerce Harriman was scheduled to appear before the senate committee report which suggested that the United States finance a four-year Marshall European reconstruction plan at a cost of between twelve billion and seventeen billion dollars.

Secretary of State Marshall and Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett, who testified in the senate Tuesday, shifted to the house committee today. The state chiefs were due to be examined on exact details of the stop-gap aid plan as they were in the senate.

MEANWHILE, a lively fight at the special session opening next Monday was promised on administration demands that congress appropriate two billion dollars for foreign relief during the fiscal year ending next June.

ANOTHER SHOT OF COLD HEADS INTO OHIO AREA

The first pre-Winter cold spell was hanging on today and weather bureau forecasters predicted a further drop in temperatures by tomorrow morning.

The mercury will range between 20 and 25 degrees tonight over the state as another shot of cold air from the Northwest moves into this area.

The change in the weather brought an end to the rain which had been falling intermittently for several days. A few light snow flurries were forecast for the Lake Erie area through tomorrow.

Last night the mercury dropped to 28 degrees in Circleville, and to below freezing levels most everywhere in Ohio.

The President's plane, in which two months ago he flew 5,000 miles to Brazil, was grounded in conformance with a suggestion by the Douglas factory.

GALLUP, N. M., Nov. 12—A thorough investigation was centered today on a fire aboard an American Airlines DC-6 airliner that was forced to make a dramatic emergency landing at a Gallup airport, saving the lives of 21 passengers and a crew of four.

Civil aeronautics authorities and company experts from Los Angeles already were on the scene to begin their investigation, and more were expected to arrive from Fort Worth, Tex., later today.

All aboard scrambled to safety yesterday after the pilot brought down the plane which was shooting fire and smoke from its underside, and the (Continued on Page Two)

FOES OF ROXAS SCORE MANILA VOTE VICTORY

QUICK ACTION TO BE ASKED ON CREDIT CONTROL

Signs On Capital Hill Also Point To Possible Return Of Meat Rationing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—Renewal of credit controls appeared likely today to be one of the first actions sought in the special session of congress.

There was an indication also that meat rationing will be seriously advocated in the regular session next January.

Sen. Flanders (R) Vt., chairman of the eastern price investigating subcommittee, said he will propose reenactment of credit controls at the first meeting of the banking committee. He expressed belief that a bill to renew the controls should be rushed through congress immediately as "non-controversial" legislation.

Renewal of credit controls had the backing of senate GOP policy Chairman Taft of Ohio. Taft said he "regretted" that the controls had been scrapped and that they ought to be restored.

Flanders indicated that his subcommittee's report, which was to go to Taft's economic committee today or tomorrow, discusses the expected shrinkage in the meat supply.

Flanders declined to disclose what the report will recommend, but said the subcommittee members are in unanimous agreement, and added that he is "unwillingly" leaning toward meat rationing. He said: "I am being unwillingly pushed into the belief that it may be necessary eventually to ration meat. I don't like that solution, and I am calling on somebody to offer a better one."

Flanders said he believes that "letting go of rationing is worse than starting," but offered a possible solution to that problem. He said: "Perhaps we could let go of it by progressive increases in (Continued on Page Two)"

BRITISH BUDGET SHOWS SURPLUS OF $1,200,000,000

LONDON, Nov. 12—Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton submitted an emergency British budget to the house of commons today and caused a sensation by failing to "soak the rich" as had been anticipated.

On the contrary, his budget, which showed an "unprecedented" surplus of one billion, 12 million dollars, struck heavily at the workingman's pocket. There was no income tax increase.

But Dalton applied drastic new levies on beer and betting and announced heavy increases in sales taxes.

STORM IN CIO NEARING END

Anti-Red Leader Redeeming Pledge To Put An End To Factionalism

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 12—The CIO United Auto Workers union today approached complete unity among its leadership for the first time in 11 stormy years.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther, with the overwhelming 11th annual convention, is redeeming a pledge made 19 months ago to end "factionalism" in the union.

The 40-year-old anti-Communist leader came to Atlantic City determined to place his own men in the union's top executive posts and speedily is achieving his goal.

Delegates to the week-long meeting of the big labor union overwhelmingly re-elected Reuther as president and then ousted his opponent, George F. Addes, from an 11-year reign as UAW secretary-treasurer.

THE CONVENTION chose Emil Mazey, of Detroit, a Reuther-backed candidate, to succeed Addes. The vote was 4,820 to 2,572 in favor of Mazey, 34-year-old member of the UAW's executive board, who gained that job last year while still in the Army.

Reuther sought the two union vice-presidencies and tomorrow he will go after a majority of the executive board.

Reuther has taken every trick since the gathering as (Continued on Page Two)

Reply Awaited From Truman On Vishinsky 'Hatred-Animus' Quote

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—Top United States diplomats in New York waited for the White House to reply today to Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky's quotation from a 1941 statement by President Truman to prove his charges of Anglo-American "hatred and bitter animus" toward the U.S.S.R.

Several key officials, including Warren R. Austin, chief of the U. S. delegation to the United Nations, were present at a dinner of the Foreign Press Association when Vishinsky renewed his attack on Western statesmen. They withheld comment.

President Truman was a Democratic senator from Missouri on June 24, 1941, when he made the remarks quoted by Vishinsky as follows:

"If we see that Germany is winning we ought to help Russia and if Russia is winning we ought to help Germany and that way let them kill as many as possible."

Vishinsky referred to Truman as "one of the most prominent American statesmen" but did not mention his name. He did not quote the entire statement which included the following additional words:

"...ALTHOUGH I don't want to see Hitler victorious under any circumstances. Neither of them think anything of their pledged word."

At Washington, no reply from the White House was immediately forthcoming.

The dinner at which Vishinsky accused "prominent Anglo-American statesmen" of pursuing a consistent policy of "hatred and vicious animus toward the Soviet Union" was held to honor mathematician-scientist Albert Einstein.

Austin served blunt notice on Russia in another speech at the dinner that majority U. N. decisions on atomic controls and other vital peace problems "cannot be shattered by defiance, boycott or other attempts of the minority at nullification."

HERBERT ACTS TO CUT STATE AUTO ACCIDENTS

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12—Governor Thomas J. Herbert made a special plea today to law enforcement officials throughout the state to combat rising traffic accident rates.

Governor Herbert asked for cooperation with the state highway patrol after Colonel George Mingle disclosed an increase of 22.6 per cent in all types of traffic accidents for the first 10 months of 1947 over the corresponding period in 1946.

This percentage applies to accidents the patrol investigated. A special appeal was made to individual motorists by the governor to cooperate in the safety campaign.

Governor Herbert warned motorists: "Don't let the snow and icy weather catch you with your auto in faulty condition."

The patrol investigated 13,569 accidents in the first 10 months of this year against 11,063 for the same period in '46. This figure included 531 killed and 10,295 injured, against 489 killed and 9,607 injured last year.

OTHER GENERALS MAY BE COY; NOT EICHELBERGER

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 12—General Eisenhower and General MacArthur may be coy about the presidency of the United States. But not General Robert L. Eichelberger. No, sir!

The commander of the Eighth Army in Japan and MacArthur's chief of staff was asked in a letter from an enthusiastic admirer in Cincinnati what he would do if the presidency were offered him.

The general smiled and commented dryly to an Armistice Day gathering: "I'll take the job."

SPY CONFESSES NORMANDIE FIRE

Nazis Tells Of Giving Signal To Apply Torches To Big Troopship

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—The French language newspaper "France-Amerique," reported today that a German spy has confessed setting the fire that ruined the great French liner "Normandie."

The weekly newspaper, in a signed article by G. F. Estrangin, said the man is named Fritz Scheffer and that he operated in the United States as an agent of the Nazi spy master Admiral Canaris.

The article states that Scheffer was accidentally picked up recently by German police on another charge.

Although the possibility of sabotage was raised at the time it was finally decided later that the Normandie, taken over for conversion into a troopship by U. S. authorities, had burned and sunk because of carelessness. It subsequently was sold as scrap and dismantled.

The French weekly said that Scheffer was a hairdresser in "a New York department store," after working at his trade in Chicago and San Francisco.

IT QUOTES Scheffer as confessing to Allied intelligence officers in Germany:

"It is I who started the fire on board the Normandie. The whole affair was arranged in New York. I was in charge of those who were to start the fire. I was to give the signal and tell those under me where to point their blow torches."

"But I was not the big boss of the sabotage. He was a special envoy of Admiral Canaris and I knew him only as 'No. 437,' during our meetings in a Harlem cafe."

WEST EUROPEAN MERGER SOUGHT BY DE GAULLE

French Leader Bids For American Cooperation In Facing Soviet

PARIS, Nov. 12—A union of Western Europe with United States cooperation to offset the menace of Soviet Russia was urged today by Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

De Gaulle said that France should "take the initiative" in seeking a pact with the United States and Great Britain in connection with reorganization of Western Europe because France "is the most menaced nation on the continent."

In his first major news conference since his emergence as France's "strong man" in recent municipal elections, De Gaulle did not mention Russia by name but he said:

"WE ARE threatened by a huge nation, the strongest enemy we have ever had in our history—stronger even than Germany because our present enemy has a political party that is working against us within our own frontiers."

"It happens that another world power considers itself threatened, and indeed this is not without reason."

"It is natural that those threatened should strive to unite to avoid the worst."

"And if the worst should happen, they should strive to dominate the situation."

"FURTHERMORE, this should be the prospect to face when arrangements are being made between the United States and other European powers."

De Gaulle said that "France probably is the country most threatened today."

The conservative leader bitterly attacked the wave of Communist-inspired strikes which for months have crippled French industry.

He advocated a Franco-Italian customs union and full economic cooperation between the two countries.

De Gaulle insisted on full control of a future Germany from the Ruhr valley and strongly opposed any re-creation of a unified or centralized Germany "bent on conquest."

Concerning future relations between France and the United States, De Gaulle said:

"THE UNITED States has raw materials. We have our geography, a French union and a moral influence. We also have an organization for Western Europe with those who want to cooperate."

De Gaulle added that there are some nations that "do not want to cooperate." He said that Europe and the world must face the fact that another war "is possible."

In reply to questioning, the former Free French hero said (Continued on Page Two)

WALLACE SEES NO THREAT OF EARLY RUSS WAR

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12—Former Vice President Henry A. Wallace said in Cleveland today he saw no threat of an early war between America and Russia, and cited Russian-American accord on the Palestine question, "the best news of the last six weeks."

The New Deal secretary of agriculture said the threat of inflation and this country's financial assistance to Europe were inseparable. He added that congress should consider price control and rationing when it deliberates European aid.

Wallace said he opposed further loans to China and compulsory military training.

"But a war is possible."
"That's all. We must face the possibility, must look things in the face, must not shut our eyes before the reality."

"THAT HAS cost us plenty in the past."
De Gaulle warned that France must "immediately organize, materially and morally, against this threat" from within.

The tall, slender French leader said that the people of his country "feel themselves menaced from inside as well as on the frontiers," and predicted that these fears will strengthen his "French Rally" party.

The party emerged as the nation's strongest political faction in recent municipal elections.

In his first news conference since re-emerging as France's "strong man," De Gaulle declared:

"I COULD foresee six months ago what the R.P.F. (French Rally) would be, and can predict now that it will continue to spread throughout France, except for a few separatists and isolated, melancholy people."

"This will happen because the French people feel themselves menaced from the inside as well as on the frontiers, and feel the need of uniting for public safety."

De Gaulle addressed the correspondents gathered in the Maison de La Resistance on the fashionable Rue Francois premier.

DECLARING "there always has been feudalism in one form or another," the soldier-statesman remarked:

"Of course, we no longer have dungeons, but feudalism exists in the labor unions, among our political opportunists, among some of our business leaders."

"Naturally, these feudalists never favor a movement like ours, which does its duty."

"They are against the R.P.F. because they do not want strong nations."

"This nation has been run by politicians who have convinced themselves that they are the republic. That is not true, because they do not have the people behind them."

De Gaulle went on to say that "syndical liberty is sacred," adding: "In the France of tomorrow, one can rely on professional liberty."

His firm control of the convention first was demonstrated when he sought and obtained a mandate to comply with the Taft-Hartley act by filing non-Communist affidavits. The Ades-Thomas - Leonard faction bitterly opposed the move.

THIS WEEK'S string of Reuther successes climaxes a drive which the UAW president began in March, 1946, to end the internal leadership strife which has plagued the 900,000-member union.

ber of specialized workers and put them under him.

"The firm which was given the contract for converting the Normandie into a troopship had for workers a number of white Russians, who didn't want to see the Soviet Union aided, and also several former members of the German-American bund."

"When I gave the signal, about ten men lighted the highly inflammable piles of kapok-stuffed lifebelts with their blow torches."

"When these were afire my men turned their torches on the wood work of the grand salon being careful to light those portions nearest portholes so the draft would be good."

"IT WAS NOT until these fires were well underway that I ordered an alarm turned in. Smoke was so thick the air was suffocating."

"Contradictory reports were given to firemen in order to retard their efforts. When they finally got to work, I and my men were far away. And of course in our sabotage preparations we had not overlooked the fire-fighting equipment."

"I did not stay long in the United States after this, but went to Argentina where I put myself at the disposal of Felix Schmidt. I stayed there a few months and then went back to Germany."

The newspaper described the man as a former SS member who is an unregenerate Nazi.

The Normandie rechristened the Lafayette, was at her dock in the Hudson river February 9, 1942, when fire broke out. Flames swiftly spread through the great liner and efforts to check them were unsuccessful.

Finally, from the tons of water poured on the fire, the ship keeled over and sank to the shallow bottom of the Hudson river.

She later was raised at an enormous cost, but never used and eventually sold for several hundred thousand dollars. Only recently the vessel was completely broken up and her steel sold as scrap.

opposition came from Sen. Taft, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican policy committee. Taft told a news conference that he thought the administration figure was too high and that he would fight it.

The two billion 657 million dollar figure was given to the senate foreign relations committee by Secretary Marshall. It was made up of one billion 500 million dollars to finance the long-term Marshall plan for three months beginning March 1, 1948; 500 million for occupation costs throughout the world; sixty million for China, and 597 million for Austria, France and Italy.

Taft was sharply critical of the European program. He asserted that it had an inflationary effect. He declared he believed that the United States could give no more aid to Europe than it had in the past.

Sen. Vandenberg, (R) Mich., senate foreign relations chairman, informed of Taft's views, merely laughed and said, "we'll see." Sen. Connally (D) Tex., minority leader on the foreign relations committee, simply asked, "does he mean he's going to fight or just talk?"

LOVETT, who headed the administration working group on both the relief and Marshall plan measures, was questioned in detail on the possibilities of the program succeeding.

He declared that it was a reasonable hope that, when Europe again gets on its feet, the 16 nations due to participate in the Marshall plan, again will be trading with Russian satellites in Eastern Europe, where the bulk of their trade was before the war.

Lewis Douglas, ambassador to London, testified that there was hope of British economy again getting on its feet. He reported that Britain plans to be able to export coal at least in minor quantities in 1948.

Normally a coal exporter, Britain during the past severe winter, was obliged to buy coal from the United States.

WOMAN HURT, TWO ARRESTED IN CAR MISHAPS

A young woman suffered minor injuries and two motorists were arrested as a result of two traffic accidents Wednesday.

Mrs. Kay Lindsey, 21, Statesville, N. C., sustained face lacerations at 8:15 a. m. when the auto in which she was a passenger, driven west on U. S. Route 22, by her husband James Lindsey, 28, skidded on the Deer Creek bridge near Williamsport and collided head-on with a westbound truck operated by Clarence Cooper, 53, Route 2, Circleville.

The injured woman was removed to Berger hospital by a passing motorist and she was released after being given first aid. The truck and auto were badly damaged.

State Highway Patrolman Clyde E. Wells arrested Mr. Lindsey on a reckless driving charge and Justice of the Peace Harold O. Eveland imposed a fine of $25 and costs on the North Carolina man.

An auto driven south on South Western avenue by Charles Zaenglein, 26, railroad worker, 424 East Mill street, was in collision at 7:15 a. m. with a car driven east on West Mound street by William Shunkwiler, 32, railroad worker, Williamsport. The crash, damaging both vehicles, happened at the intersection. Patrolman Elmer Merriam arrested Mr. Zaenglein on a charge of failure to observe a stop sign. Mr. Zaenglein was released under $3 bond for appearance at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the court of Mayor Ben H. Gordon.

The Vermont senator said he did not believe that President Truman should try to handle credit control on an "emergency" basis—as he might do under the existing law—but that it should be renewed by statute.

Flanders also foresaw continuance of rent control. He said he would support a general increase of 15 per cent on units which have not benefited by the voluntary leases.

IN THE meantime, Flanders disclosed, he is taking on a new price inquiry. He will investigate nails and millwork, as a member of the joint housing committee. He said the inquiry, requested by Sen. Gamble (R) N. Y., committee chairman will center on:

"1. Nails, which already are in a grey market."

"2. Millwork, which is developing into a grey market item."

The housing cost report, he said will come partially from data collected by the McCarthy subcommittee in its nationwide hearings.

COLUMBUS MAN DRAWS FINE FOR HIT-SKIP CRASH

A hit-skip motorist was fined $50 and costs Tuesday night in Circleville by Justice of the Peace Harold O. Eveland.

George Bunn, Columbus, was found guilty, following a hearing before Justice Eveland, on a charge of having failed to stop after the auto he drove sideswiped the car operated by Haskell Griffith, Circleville, last Saturday night on U. S. Route 23 at the north edge of Circleville. No one was hurt but Mr. Griffith's car was damaged.

State Highway Patrolman L. G. Ridenour investigated the hit-skip crash and Bunn was arrested Tuesday in a West Main street tavern by Patrolman Alva Shasteen at Patrolman Ridenour's request.

Theodore Walker, arrested on Route 23 by Patrolman Ridenour, Tuesday, was fined $10 and costs by Justice Eveland for failure to possess a driver's license.

EXPERTS PROBE AIRLINER FIRE

ment extinguished the blaze and saved the huge airliner.

The close brush with death caused both American and United Airlines to announce temporary withdrawal of all DC-6 craft from service until all hazards have been eliminated from the planes.

Investigators said they hoped their inquiry into the fire aboard the airliner would lead them to the cause of the blaze and explosion of a United Airlines DC-6 at Bryce Canyon, Utah, last Oct. 24.

IN THE BRYCE Canyon crash 52 persons perished when the flaming plane was unable to make an emergency landing strip and crashed into a cliff.

In yesterday's emergency landing at Gallup the pilot, Capt. Evan W. Chatfield, blinded by smoke, set the plane down 100 yards off the regular runway at Thunderbird field, a private airport used by Monarch Air Lines. He said:

"We were no more than five minutes from the Gallup airport when the fire began."

"THE COCKPIT and cabin were filled with smoke and I couldn't see the ground. I knew I had passed the end of the runway, but I couldn't see it." The big plane was en route from San Francisco to New York, and its next scheduled stop was Tulsa, Okla.

ment extinguished the blaze and saved the huge airliner.
The close brush with death caused both American and United Airlines to announce temporary withdrawal of all DC-6 craft from service until all hazards have been eliminated from the planes.
Investigators said they hoped their inquiry into the fire aboard the airliner would lead them to the cause of the blaze and explosion of a United Airlines DC-6 at Bryce Canyon, Utah, last Oct. 24.
IN THE Bryce Canyon crash 52 persons perished when the flaming plane was unable to make an emergency landing strip and crashed into a cliff.
In yesterday's emergency landing at Gallup the pilot, Capt. Evan W. Chatfield, blinded by smoke, set the plane down 100 yards off the regular runway at Thunderbird field, a private airport used by Monarch Air Lines. He said:

"We were no more than five minutes from the Gallup airport when the fire began."
"THE COCKPIT and cabin were filled with smoke and I couldn't see the ground. I knew I had passed the end of the runway, but I couldn't see it."
The big plane was en route from San Francisco to New York, and its next scheduled stop was Tulsa, Okla.

'I Was An American Slave Girl In Russia'

IRON CURTAIN HIDES TRAGEDY

Ohioan Tells Of Being Kept Too Busy To Die In Red Camp

(Irma Mohaupt, a 22-year-old American girl, born in Cincinnati, was living with her parents in Yugoslavia in 1944 when the Russians took over. Over her protests the Soviets sent her to a slave labor camp in the Russian Ukraine. Her knowledge of the Russian language and contacts with all walks of life in the surrounding towns enabled her to see and hear conditions at first hand. Her observations of life inside Russia as well as her bitter three-year experiences in Soviet slave labor camps make one of the most revealing and dramatic stories ever to emerge from behind the Iron Curtain.)

By IRMA MOHAUPT
NEW YORK, Nov. 12—I am free at last, but I will never be able to erase the memory of the terrifying horrors I went through as a labor slave of the Russians.

For three years I was forced to work long hours at back-breaking jobs with a slave labor battalion of women in the Russian Ukraine, at Krivoi-Rog, near the Dnieper dam.

For three terrible years I endured—and miraculously survived—cold, starvation and filth.

While members of our labor camp group were suffering and dying at the rate of 17 a day, the Russian soldiers guarding us and the civilians in the neighboring towns were not faring much better than we.

Many of the guards told me they had nothing to eat most of the time, and were better off when the Germans were in their country.

The Russian soldiers and civilians I met in the towns said 95 percent of the country was against the Communist regime and cursed Stalin and other party leaders for their plight.

They told me how the five percent were kept in power by tight armed control. Critics of the government overheard by spies were thrown into Russian concentration camps.

There were more discontented Russians kept in a large prison adjoining our camp than there were slave laborers from other countries.

At least 50,000 Russians were kept in the heavily fortified and guarded prison in our area alone.

When I arrived in Krivoi-Rog I weighed 130 pounds. At the end of one year I was down to 90 pounds.

Among the "walking dead" in our camp I knew of at least eight or ten other girls who claimed they were Americans also.

I have no reason to doubt them, but I have no proof of their identities or citizenship.

One girl told me she was born in Chicago and described the tall buildings there. She said the Russians had seized her in November, 1943. She said her name was Barbara Koling.

They separated the prisoners so often I couldn't learn the other names.

Anyhow, I was so hungry, weak and miserable I didn't even know my own name at times.

The Russians kept us so busy we didn't even have time to die.

It was always work, work and more work.

My plea that I was an American was always answered by the camp commandant with:

"WE DON'T care if you are an American. You are here, and you will stay here until the day you die."

My nightmare began in October, 1944.

Russian partisan troops took over Belgrade in Yugoslavia and the little nearby village where my parents, Hungarian-born, were living at the time. At the age of 6, I had been taken from Cincinnati where I was born to Europe with my parents.

Our house, one of the largest in the village, was confiscated by the Partisans as their general headquarters.

My father was taken by the secret police for questioning. Later villagers told me they had seen the police take him to a cemetery where he was forced to dig his own grave.

They told me the police then threw him into the pit and shot him.

The Russians ordered all women in the village between the ages of 16 to 37 to register for work in Yugoslavia with the Russian army.

When we reported a Russian officer told us we would only be used for only fourteen days on labor details and then freed.

He warned us if anyone escaped, hostages in the village would be shot. My turn to go came five days before Christmas.

Before they took me away I protested to the Russian secret police officer in command that I was an American citizen.

He asked me whether I wouldn't like to see Russia. When I replied that I wanted to stay with my mother, he said:

"We don't care what you are. We are going to send you off to Russia to help rebuild our buildings."

I naively asked:

"Girls to build buildings?" He replied:

"Women do everything in Russia, and you will be one of them whether you like it or not."

The Russian warned me to go peaceable, or I would disappear and never be seen again.

I tried to cheer my mother by telling her it couldn't be so bad. After all, I assured her, it's only for 14 days.

Fourteen days! How stupid I was actually to believe the Russians would detain me 14 days and then free me.

IT TURNED out to be three years of an unbelievable nightmare of slavery.

Had I only known their plans then I would have run away. I would have run until I fell. I would have gone through any pain or misery or even death itself to escape from the days and nights of horror that were to follow.

On the morning of Dec. 28, 1944 Russian soldiers with bayoneted rifles prodded us onto horse drawn wagons and took us to the nearby city of Kikinda where we were put to work for three days in a cheese factory.

On New Year's eve without any warning, we were ordered from the factory into the freezing streets.

The Russians commanded us to line up in columns of five, and marched us to a railroad siding, where a trainload of cattle cars was strung out as far as the eye could see.

THEY JAMMED us, in groups of fifty, into the cattle cars which had one heavily barred window, and padlocked the door.

Three thousand slaves were starting the long trip into the land of the living dead.

UNDAUNTED BY DARKNESS

TO 500 BOYS at his old school, Harrow, which now calls him "its greatest Harrovian", Winston Churchill spoke of the future of England:

"You are going out into the world. You must never despair of your country's glory and never cease to labor for its enduring fame.

"Do not be daunted by dark signs, do not be daunted by long monotony and wearying toil. Whatever it be, remember the reward is the same, in that you pass on to another generation the glories and happiness and virtue of our island home."

He told the boys that knowledge of history was of great importance, then left them with those ringing words—sound counsel for young citizens of any country—and the attitude that has so far guaranteed Britain's invincibility.

As Americans think of the world today, and peer about, too often, with horror at what they fear may come, these words of Churchill sound with striking force.

If we are undaunted by dark signs, by long monotony and exhausting labor, if we remember that the reward of valor is in the deed itself, if we work for the purpose we deem right without seeking to see the outcome of our action, then indeed the recompense is sure. It is to pass on to another generation the glories, happiness and virtue of our nation. This is no narrow nationalism. It is the way in which through toil and sacrifice we may share our power and glory of just and friendly living with the world around us and the world yet to come.

AIDING ITALY'S CRAFTS

ITALY'S skilled craft workers are coming back with material aid and encouragement from America. Some 4,000,000 Italians, about one tenth of the country's population, normally is engaged in handicrafts for a living. The war made terrific inroads in the industries, not only through bombing damage as at Faenza, cradle of ceramic art, but in supplies and equipment of all sorts.

An American non-profit group, Handicraft Development Inc., has collected funds and has been instrumental in setting up kilns, sending machinery parts, materials and money to restore workshops and to help individual artisans. The Americans backing it are largely Italian-born anti-Fascists who fled during the Mussolini era, but who understand the value to Italy of its handicraft.

The china, glass, textiles and leatherwork turned out can become an important contribution to Italy's foreign trade income, but more significant still is the morale value of this reviving of handicrafts, for Italy for generations has been a country where the handworker was important.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

To governments which control their press, the American foreign correspondent is a general nuisance. Such governments are accustomed to handing their own press such releases as they desire to have published and no other stories appear. Such a press is an adjunct of government and really exists to suppress the truth.

The American foreign correspondent builds his personal career by finding the facts for himself. He tries to see politicians who do not wish to see him; he hunts out the opposition leaders and asks embarrassing questions; he tries to know how a people actually lives; he pries into statistics. This is the nature of the American animal, whether he be Right or Left or just in between.

Most of all, he likes to watch the functioning of his own government abroad, and what he discovers he usually writes about sooner or later. Sometimes he is a visa-warmer; that is, he avoids sharp criticism so that he may be permitted to remain in the foreign country or return to it after he has had a spell away from it. Many of our correspondents to Soviet Russia have been accused of being visa-warmers. But lots of them, after they have left the country, have published magazine articles and books which provided a more accurate picture of that country, its government and its people than their day-by-day reports.

The Russians and their satellites are expelling American correspondents. This is an old process not only with Soviet Russia but with other countries which have consciously sought to discourage the inquiring reporter and to cultivate the man or woman who is intellectually, emotionally or cravenly favorably disposed. Some men like to live in certain countries and that proves advantageous to a government that can, at any moment, order their passports taken up. The expulsion of Arthur M. Brandel, of the "New York Times," and his wife, Mary Lester, of the United Press, by Yugoslavia is not as unusual as it may seem except that they actually got into Yugoslavia. Many foreign correspondents are not even permitted to proceed to their posts.

The American newspaper reader does not want safe correspondents, men and women who behave as governments wish them to. They want prying Toms, fellows who get below the surface, who unearth the story that the official wants hidden. A newspaper man must assume that all government information officers are, by the nature of their calling, professional liars often enough to justify the assumption that what they tell must be carefully scrutinized. Our own government has been notorious for its false press information for 15 years. The reader is more protected by the nosy reporter who sometimes gets it a little twisted than by the good boy who repeats what some official tells him and is gently patted on the head by some stuffed shirt.

This country ought to adopt a policy that when an American correspondent is thrown out of a country in line of duty, all correspondents from that country should be expelled from the United States. We have the complication, of course, of the United Nations which would make it possible for these correspondents to get themselves assigned to UN and live in the USA. We might, however, force them to stay somewhere near Lake Success, under po-

Painful Migraine Headache Is Very Often Inherited

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ONE of the things that many of us inherit from our parents and grandparents is that very troublesome sickness called migraine. I know, because my father and grandfather had it; I have suffered from it since an early age and am still plagued with it now and then; several of my youngsters have it, too.

As a matter of fact, seven out of every ten people afflicted with it show a similar family history.

Thus, it is—for personal as well as for professional reasons—that I am always on the alert when something appears in the scientific literature which seems to promise new methods in the treatment of this annoying disorder.

Periodic Attacks

Migraine takes the form of periodic attacks of severe headache, which, in eight out of ten cases, is confined to one side of the head. There are two other outstanding symptoms—sickness at the stomach and vomiting—and, when the three occur together, a diagnosis of migraine is usually easy to make.

In addition, pain on exposing the eyes to light and blurring of the eyesight are common, but do not always occur. Excessive sweating is also often present. Less frequent are dizziness, ringing in the ears, and an increase in urine excretion.

At Any Age

The attacks may start at any age, but rarely persist beyond sixty. Many women have migraine attacks with or just before their regular periods. Attacks may become less or disappear completely during pregnancy or after change of life. There is some evidence also that migraine may be due to allergy, or oversensitivity to some food.

Agonizing for Patient

Unfortunately, migraine is not only agonizing for the patient but perplexing to the physician. From time to time, many different forms of treatment have been suggested, none of which is entirely successful. However, there are a number of things on which most persons agree. For example, during an attack, the patient should be put to bed and the clothing loosened. The room should be dark, quiet, and well-ventilated. An ice-pack should be put on, if possible, and the patient should be given oxygen to breathe if it is available. This has been found to relieve four out of every five cases. If the patient must go to work, he should wear loose clothing.

A Drug Administered

As to medicine, a drug known as ergotamine tartrate is administered. This drug is given either by injection into a vein, under the skin, or it may even be taken by mouth. Of course, the exact dose to be employed must be determined by the physician. It is important to keep the dose as small as possible, consistent with relief of the headache.

In certain cases, ergotamine may cause such things as sickness to the stomach, vomiting, and muscle cramps. Such reactions may, in part, be ward off by the use of a drug known as atropine, and by massage of the cramped muscles.

If the attack of migraine persists, injections of salt and sugar solutions into a vein may be found helpful. There are also various pain-relieving drugs which may be helpful, but it is important not to allow the patient to become habituated to their use.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

L. S.: What causes heart murmurs? Is there any cure for this condition?
Answer: Some heart murmurs are due to destruction of one of the valves of the heart, or to a defect in the septum between the two sides of the heart. These are called organic. Since organic heart murmurs are due to the destruction of tissue, there is no cure for them. Many heart murmurs, however, are functional, that is, not due to any destruction of tissue. These are entirely harmless and may be disregarded.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
WHEN Suzy's small head with the feathery dark hair was lowered intently over another picture Alison's thoughts strayed . . . It had been such a long time since she had seen Sam and she felt a piercing longing to see him. The feeling was like a swelling river becoming more intensified as the winter days went on. And she could not speak of him. Only Suzy and Teresa could speak of him. Only they spoke to him when he telephoned, Suzy brightly, asking questions of the farm she was beginning to know, and Teresa charmingly, her warm, throaty voice transported to the large, almost bare hall in the house in Virginia where Sam stood beside a teakwood table. A sea-going Tarant had brought the table back from India a long time ago, he had told Alison one day.

Philip stirred in her mind as if he would not be forgotten. Philip, his quiet, decent friendliness, his tenderness. A man can be tender also. When she had met him for lunch last Saturday (having to look at her watch more than she cared to because she had to hurry home so Annette would leave) he had made her feel, unhappily, his need of her. It was as if he had been trying to say, "I need you, Alison." Had he known, she thought, that she had never been able to refuse anyone's need of her, perhaps he would have put it into words and she, returning his honesty, would have committed herself to his keeping. By his own selfishness Philip made you unselfish. He made you think, "It doesn't matter how I feel if I can make Philip happy, if I can return to him some of that which he has given to others." He led you to the edge of a dangerous commitment. She might well wake up one day married to Philip with every vital ingredient in their marriage except love.

The ringing of the bell was so sudden and sharp and unexpected it seemed to shatter her. Getting to the door was a race between Suzy and herself. As usual Suzy won. But at once the child stepped back, her thoughts turned in upon herself at the sight of a strange, glittering woman.

Nicola still glittered. The impression Alison had taken back to Vermont with her of a woman who glittered need not change in the present. For the pin or clip or whatever it was on Nicola's smart black hat was a shining thing as was also the sleek black satin dress she wore beneath the great silver fox jacket. Her eyes were still dark and merry and worldly and wise and she still looked as if she cared only for clothes and laughter and men. Her mouth was her own creation. Against the whiteness of her teeth it was like blood on snow.

She stood, vibrant, on the threshold and her husky voice quickened with laughter.

"I'm Nicola. Remember me?" Alison's smile was her best. "Of course I do."

"Four years are not so long. But where have they gone? What have I done with them?" Her eyes dropped to Suzy. "Not long, did I say? Long enough to get you here, my girl."

"She's shy with strangers at first. Come in."

"Teresa's daughter shy? What about eugenics? All right, what about them? Your name's Suzy, isn't it? Edna said you were a darling. Both of you. I'm going to a party. I always feel wicked in black satin. But the party is only around the corner and I wanted to see this child and you, Alison. You again."

"We were in the living room," Alison said.

"Doesn't Teresa call it a drawing room? Stupid, pretentious name." She led the way, removing her coat, and sat on one of the velvet seats. "I've never been in this house before. But it's what I expected. It's like Teresa—gray for melancholia, green for earthiness and yellow for warmth. She's all of those things and they're in her house. I've never been very fond of your precocious sister, my dear." To Suzy's astonished little face she said, "I beg your pardon. It's your mother I'm speaking of, isn't it?"

Suzy crawled up beside Alison. She looked pleasantly bewitched. Alison said, "Edna's been very anxious for you to come."

"Yes. You know her, don't you? There have to be people like Edna who give everything and take nothing because there are so many of us who take all and give nothing. Edna and Philip always know where the years go. They never have lost years. It's good to be home. The weather's horrible and the buildings need their faces washed—but it's home. And the hospitality is immense, so immense, in fact, that I can't be driving back and forth all the time. Edna and Philip always worry about my absent-minded driving. So I've moved into a hotel until the party pace ceases."

"Are you going to be here long?" Alison asked. She took one of Suzy's warm, chubby hands and held it. Suzy's pulse was beating fast.

Nicola took in her breath. She leaned against the pillow and looked at them.

"I don't know how long I'll be here. I wish I could stay and be contented. Dig a hole and be possessive about it and roam no more. But the sun is shining in Georgia where I don't have to wear many clothes and I'm like a lazy cat in the sun . . . You were the loveliest girl I ever saw, Alison. You had dew on you and stardust. There are some people who stand out as if they've been appliqued. Those are the people you remember for beauty and for quality. You were one of them. We haven't one single thing in common; yet I wanted to see you again just as for beauty and quality I wanted to see again. The proprietor of a little hotel in Salerno, Remember Salerno? An old man, very wise but full of beauty and quality, too . . . And for a long time I've wanted to see Teresa's child."

"Me?" Suzy queried.

Nicola leaned forward and a smile stirred on her mouth.

"Yes. You. I've been wanting to see you, Suzy. Very much. You have your mother's eyes. You won't miss anything." She looked at Alison. "She doesn't look like Sam, does she? Only the dark hair. But Sam's hair is shiny black. No, she doesn't look like Sam at all."

"That's my daddy," Suzy said.

Nicola sat back and drew in her breath again.

"Yes, dear. Yes, of course. I'm inquisitive with appalling manners. Forgive me. You're a person aren't you? That means you're just like us except that you're smaller." To Alison she said, "Is Teresa going to marry Sam again?"

"I don't know," she almost whispered. There were tears in her throat.

"But it's what everyone wants, isn't it? How nice, how cozy, how convenient! Then everyone will sit back and think that a wrong has been made right and that the divorce was an unfortunate incident and that virtue and love always triumph in the end . . . Other things masquerade as love and think they're getting away with it by wearing a false face. Some pretty unsavory things hide behind the face of love. How well I know. But I must be going."

Alison wished she wouldn't go. She wished Nicola would stay and tell her all the secrets in her eyes.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—I am 32. When I was one-and-twenty and no use to talk to me, as Housman put it, the altar was the old Onyx club on 52nd street and the high priest was Stuff Smith, with his hot violin.

The ritual was brief and simple—fantastic amounts of beer downtown at the German-American A. C., with a good, if occasionally curdled, song ringing clear . . . and then whooping up Third Avenue, with the world stepping deferentially aside, to hear The Stuff.

Duke Ellington and Jack Teagarden, the Big Gate, and Chu Berry—oh, there were a hundred idols, and if you hummed the eighth bar of a strange little thing that Jellyroll had recorded 10 years before, there always were at least two citizens at your table, or the one next to it, who the date it was recorded. We were all hep. We were there. In a word, Jack, life was a ball.

Our lost battalion, our regiment of the damned, lasted five, six years. Maybe it was the war; maybe the twins, or maybe the regular Wednesday night bridge with the Carters—whatever, they seeped into the onetime celebrants of the black mass a sympathy for routine that made jazz seem grotesque to them, or, destroy the vile phrase, "kid stuff." Most of my generation has packed its Benny Goodman and Louis Armstrong records in barrels down by the coal bin.

However, then—ah, then, there wasn't a man Jack among us who wouldn't lay down his life for Maxine Sullivan.

THERE IS SOMETHING SMOKY about those night club singers; there is a whisky rasp in their throats and a tear in their eyes and there is no home for them so fitting as the low-ceilinged, through-a-glass-darkly gin mills. But Maxine Sullivan was different.

She was small and petite and she wore modest white evening gowns, and she walked out straight and surely to the microphone and sang without twisting her hands or tossing a hip. She sang "little" songs, like "Spring Is Near" and little-known show tunes, and, of course, the Scottish airs like "Loch Lomond" that were so delightful, once you had survived the first shock of hearing them swung.

Maxine's voice was like all the smiles for running water you can name; it was a cool, clear voice driven along by an irresistible beat, and we sat there and listened by the hour. At four in the morning, they would sweep us out with the old beer bottles and we would make for a ham-and-egg parlor and talk of Maxine for another hour. Oh, dem golden days!

The other night I drifted into the Ruban Bleu, where the waiters wear white ties and the cover charge is four bucks, a state of affairs that would have befuddled my bawdy companions of yesterday.

However, the place is one of those so small that the maitre d' carries a shoehorn along with his seating card, and the lights are dim, so you have the kind of joint in which Maxine used to sing so handsomely. In time, as we say when we're really living.

A PIANIST NAMED NORMAN PARIS did some fine and wonderful things with the old one that never misses hitting you bulls-eye, "Love for Sale," and a strange chanteur of sea songs named Paul Villard, and I was beginning to drift away a little from the present. Then along came Maxine Sullivan again, and I was a real gone guy; I was back a dozen years in the old Onyx, with the cut liquor and the hard-eyed hatcheck girls.

There she was again, in the white evening gown, and she was singing "Let Him Go, Let Him Tarry," and Paris and his trio were moving along softly behind her the way John Kirby and his trio used to, and the crowd sat on its hands and didn't breathe.

You never can recapture the old days—any fool knows that—but all of a sudden, I was recapturing them. All of a sudden I was one-and-twenty and there was nothing particular in the world except a big-eyed singer and a tiny room and the smoke mushrooming around and the notes of a piano and the dark night and the moon within easy reach.

Then the lights went up and the big-eyed singer disappeared and I got up and left, quick, before I had to talk with anyone.

UNDAUNTED BY DARKNESS

TO 500 BOYS at his old school, Harrow, which now calls him "its greatest Harrovian", Winston Churchill spoke of the future of England:

"You are going out into the world. You must never despair of your country's glory and never cease to labor for its enduring fame.

"Do not be daunted by dark signs, do not be daunted by long monotony and wearying toil. Whatever it be, remember the reward is the same, in that you pass on to another generation the glories and happiness and virtue of our island home."

He told the boys that knowledge of history was of great importance, then left them with those ringing words—sound counsel for young citizens of any country—and the attitude that has so far guaranteed Britain's invincibility.

As Americans think of the world today, and peer about, too often, with horror at what they fear may come, these words of Churchill sound with striking force.

If we are undaunted by dark signs, by long monotony and exhausting labor, if we remember that the reward of valor is in the deed itself, if we work for the purpose we deem right without seeking to see the outcome of our action, then indeed the recompense is sure. It is to pass on to another generation the glories, happiness and virtue of our nation. This is no narrow nationalism. It is the way in which through toil and sacrifice we may share our power and glory of just and friendly living with the world around us and the world yet to come.

ADING ITALY'S CRAFTS

ITALY'S skilled craft workers are coming back with material aid and encouragement from America. Some 4,000,000 Italians, about one tenth of the country's population, normally is engaged in handicrafts for a living. The war made terrific inroads in the industries, not only through bombing damage as at Faenza, cradle of ceramic art, but in supplies and equipment of all sorts.

An American non-profit group, Handicraft Development Inc., has collected funds and has been instrumental in setting up kilns, sending machinery parts, materials and money to restore workshops and to help individual artisans. The Americans backing it are largely Italian-born anti-Fascists who fled during the Mussolini era, but who understand the value to Italy of its handicraft.

The china, glass, textiles and leather-work turned out can become an important contribution to Italy's foreign trade income, but more significant still is the morale value of this reviving of handicrafts, for Italy for generations has been a country where the handworker was important.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

To governments which control their press, the American foreign correspondent is a general nuisance. Such governments are accustomed to handing their own press such releases as they desire to have published and no other stories appear. Such a press is an adjunct of government and really exists to suppress the truth.

The American foreign correspondent builds his personal career by finding the facts for himself. He tries to see politicians who do not wish to see him; he hunts out the opposition leaders and asks embarrassing questions; he tries to know how a people actually lives; he pries into statistics. This is the nature of the American animal, whether he be Right or Left or just in between.

Most of all, he likes to watch the functioning of his own government abroad, and what he discovers he usually writes about sooner or later. Sometimes he is a visa-warmer; that is, he avoids sharp criticism so that he may be permitted to remain in the foreign country or return to it after he has had a spell away from it. Many of our correspondents to Soviet Russia have been accused of being visa-warmers. But lots of them, after they have left the country, have published magazine articles and books which provided a more accurate picture of that country, its government and its people than their day-by-day reports.

The Russians and their satellites are expelling American correspondents. This is an old process not only with Soviet Russia but with other countries which have consciously sought to discourage the inquiring reporter and to cultivate the man or woman who is intellectually, emotionally or cravenly favorably disposed. Some men like to live in certain countries and that proves advantageous to a government that can, at any moment, order their passports taken up. The expulsion of Arthur M. Brandel, of the "New York Times," and his wife, Mary Lester, of the United Press, by Yugoslavia is not as unusual as it may seem except that they actually got into Yugoslavia. Many foreign correspondents are not even permitted to proceed to their posts.

The American newspaper reader does not want safe correspondents, men and women who behave as governments wish them to. They want prying Toms, fellows who get below the surface, who unearth the story that the official wants hidden. A newspaper man must assume that all government information officers are, by the nature of their calling, professional liars often enough to justify the assumption that what they tell must be carefully scrutinized. Our own government has been notorious for its false press information for 15 years. The reader is more protected by the nosy reporter who sometimes gets it a little twisted than by the good boy who repeats what some official tells him and is gently patted on the head by some stuffed shirt.

This country ought to adopt a policy that when an American correspondent is thrown out of a country in line of duty, all correspondents from that country should be expelled from the United States. We have the complication, of course, of the United Nations which would make it possible for these correspondents to get themselves assigned to UN and live in the USA. We might, however, force them to stay somewhere near Lake Success, under police supervision.

DIET AND HEALTH

Painful Migraine Headache Is Very Often Inherited

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ONE of the things that many of us inherit from our parents and grandparents is that very troublesome sickness called migraine. I know, because my father and grandfather had it; I have suffered from it since an early age and am still plagued with it now and then; several of my youngsters have it, too. As a matter of fact, seven out of every ten people afflicted with it show a similar family history.

Thus, it is—for personal as well as for professional reasons—that I am always on the alert when something appears in the scientific literature which seems to promise new methods in the treatment of this annoying disorder.

Periodic Attacks Migraine takes the form of periodic attacks of severe headache, which, in eight out of ten cases, is confined to one side of the head. There are two other outstanding symptoms—sickness at the stomach and vomiting—and, when the three occur together, a diagnosis of migraine is usually easy to make.

In addition, pain on exposing the eyes to light and blurring of the eyesight are common, but do not always occur. Excessive sweating is also often present. Less frequent are dizziness, ringing in the ears, and an increase in urine excretion.

At Any Age The attacks may start at any age, but rarely persist beyond sixty. Many women have migraine attacks with or just before their regular periods. Attacks may become less or disappear completely during pregnancy or after change of life. There is some evidence also that migraine may be due to allergy; or oversensitivity to some food.

Azonizing for Patient Unfortunately, migraine is not only agonizing for the patient but perplexing to the physician. From time to time, many different forms of treatment have been suggested, none of which is entirely successful. However, there are a number of things on which most persons agree. For example, during an attack, the patient should be put to bed and the clothing loosened. The room should be dark, quiet, and well-ventilated. An ice-cap should be put on, if possible, and the patient should be given oxygen to breathe if it is available. This has been found to relieve four out of every five cases. If the patient must go to work, he should wear loose clothing.

A Drug Administered As to medicine, a drug known as ergotamine tartrate is administered. This drug is given either by injection into a vein, under the skin, or it may even be taken by mouth. However, the exact dose to be employed must be determined by the physician. It is important to keep the dose as small as possible, consistent with relief of the headache.

In certain cases, ergotamine may cause such things as sickness to the stomach, vomiting, and muscle cramps. Such reactions may, in part, be ward off by the use of a drug known as atropine, and by massage of the cramped muscles. If the attack of migraine persists, injections of salt and sugar solutions into a vein may be found helpful. There are also various pain-relieving drugs which may be helpful, but it is important not to allow the patient to become habituated to their use.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS L. S.: What causes heart murmur? Is there any cure for this condition?

Answer: Some heart murmurs are due to destruction of one of the valves of the heart, or to a defect in the septum between the two sides of the heart. These are called organic. Since organic heart murmurs are due to the destruction of tissue, there is no cure for them. Many heart murmurs, however, are functional, that is, not due to any destruction of tissue. These are entirely harmless and may be disregarded. My New York

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—I am 32. When I was one-and-twenty and no use to talk to me, as Houseman put it, the altar was the old Onyx club on 52nd street and the high priest was Stuff Smith, with his hot violin.

The ritual was brief and simple—fantastic amounts of beer downtown at the German-American A. C., with a good, if occasionally curdled, song ringing clear . . . and then whooping up Third Avenue, with the world stepping deferentially aside, to hear The Stuff.

Duke Ellington and Jack Teagarden, the Big Gate, and Chu Berry—oh, there were a hundred idols, and if you hummed the eighth bar of a strange little thing that Jellyroll had recorded 10 years before, there always were at least two citizens at your table, or the one next to it, who could spot the number in 30 seconds and, in the next 20, tell you the date it was recorded. We were all hep. We were there. In a word, Jack, life was a ball.

Our lost battalion, our regiment of the damned, lasted five, six years. Maybe it was the war; maybe the twins, or maybe the regular Wednesday night bridge with the Carters—whatever, they seeped into the onetime celebrants of the black mass a sympathy for routine that made jazz seem grotesque to them, or, destroy the vile phrase, "kid stuff." Most of my generation has packed its Benny Goodman and Louis Armstrong records in barrels down by the coal bin.

However, then—ah, then, there wasn't a man Jack among us who wouldn't lay down his life for Maxine Sullivan.

THERE IS SOMETHING SMOKY about those night club singers: there is a whisky rasp in their throats and a tear in their eyes and there is no home for them so fitting as the low-ceilinged, through-a-glass-darkly gin mills. But Maxine Sullivan was different.

She was small and petite and she wore modest white evening gowns, and she walked out straight and surely to the microphone and sang without twisting her hands or tossing a hip. She sang "little" songs, like "Spring Is Near" and little-heard show tunes, and, of course, the Scottish airs like "Loch Lomond" that were so delightful, once you had survived the first shock of hearing them sung.

Maxine's voice was like all the similes for running water you can name; it was a cool, clear voice driven along by an irresistible beat, and we sat there and listened by the hour. At four in the morning, they would sweep us out with the old beer bottles and we would make for a ham-and-egg parlor and talk of Maxine for another hour, Oh, dem golden days!

The other night I drifted into the Ruban Bleu, where the waiters wear white ties and the cover charge is four bucks, a state of affairs that would have befuddled my bawdy companions of yesterday.

However, the place is one of those so small that the maitre d' carries a shoehorn along with his seating card, and the lights are dim, so you have the kind of joint in which Maxine used to sing so handsomely. In time, as we say when we're really living.

A PIANIST NAMED NORMAN PARIS did some fine and wonderful things with the old one that never misses hitting you bulls-eye, "Love for Sale," and a strange chanteur of sea songs named Paul Villard, and I was beginning to drift away a little from the present. Then along came Maxine Sullivan again, and I was a real gone guy; I was back a dozen years in the old Onyx, with the cut liquor and the hard-eyed hatcheck girls.

There she was again, in the white evening gown, and she was singing "Let Him Go, Let Him Tarry," and Paris and his trio were moving along softly behind her way John Kirby and his trio used to, and the crowd sat on its hands and didn't breathe.

You never can recapture the old days—any fool knows that—but all of a sudden, I was recapturing them. All of a sudden I was one-and-twenty and there was nothing particular in the world except a big-eyed singer and a tiny room and the smoke mushrooming around and the notes of a piano and the dark night and the moon within easy reach.

Then the lights went up and the big-eyed singer disappeared and I got up and left, quick, before I had to talk with anyone.

PLUMBERS TO LAUNCH LEAGUE SATURDAY NIGHT

Ashville Aggregation Has Outstanding Athletes On Roster

Pettibone Plumbers of Ashville will play their first game in the Mid-Ohio League Saturday night at the Ashville high school gym.

The Mid-Ohio league was recently organized with Lottie Myers of Grandview serving as president. The League is divided into two sections, the Eastern and Western division. The Plumbers are in the Eastern Division. Groveport will provide the opposition. Game time has been set for 8:15 p. m.

The Plumbers have many outstanding athletes on their roster and will be one of the teams to watch in the new circuit.

Heading the Pettibone Plumbers will be two stars who have gained much attention throughout central Ohio. They are: "Deke" Eberle, Ashville high school coach and former member of the high-scoring Capital University teams of the past few years, and Russell Gregg, former Ashville high star and later of Ohio University. Russ is currently leading the Capital City League of Columbus in scoring.

OTHER members of the team who are known to local basketball enthusiasts are Jay Gregg, former Ashville star and veteran campaigner of leagues in this area. Leon Sims, Circleville high school star of several seasons back and leader of the Blue Ribbon team of the Circleville City Industrial League. Ernie Alban, former star at Columbus South. Don Thomas, sparkplug of Ashville high's 1946 squad. Romaine "Red" Wilson, stellar Ashville alumnus. Dick Pettibone and Chuck Pettibone complete the roster.

From advance reports the new Mid-Ohio League will be one of the toughest semi-pro circuits in this part of the state.

BROWN SHARPENS DEFENSIVE PLAY TO HALT 49ERS

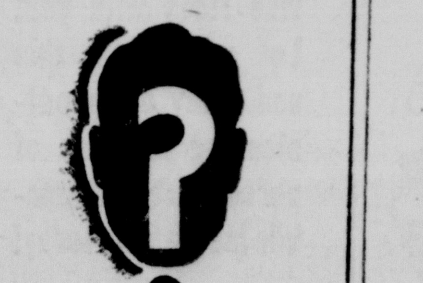

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12—Coach Paul Brown sharpened his Cleveland Browns defensive play today in preparation for Sunday's crucial encounter with the offensive-minded 49ers.

The San Francisco gridders, runners-up to the Browns in Western division standings, are sparked by two members of what Clark Shaughnessy selected as "the greatest backfield of all time." They are Quarterback Frankie Albert and Fullback Norm Standlee, two members of the Stanford team that won the Rose Bowl for Shaughnessy in 1940.

The Browns should know what to expect from Albert, for it was his passing that dumped Cleveland at the stadium last year. The southpaw is an adept ball-handler and a masterful field general. He is the key man of the 49ers' T formation attack and, in addition, does most of the punting.

Standlee possesses remarkable speed despite his 245 pounds, and is as hard to tumble as the Browns' Marion Motley.

The other two members of Shaughnessy's "greatest backfield" aren't with the 49ers but their halfback positions have been ably filled by Len Eshmont and John Strykowski.

CLEVELAND ACE DISAPPOINTED BY STORM TOUR

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12 — Bob Feller was home in Waukegan, Ill., today concluding a barnstorming trip that wound up in Bill Veck's office in Cleveland. The Indians ace moundsman conferred briefly with his boss on salary terms for 1948 and then home. Veck described the talk as "a preliminary conference" before their meeting next January.

The Tribe president said, "I wish all players were as easy to talk salary with as Feller." Feller is believed to have received $87,000 for last year's hurling, the highest amount ever paid a player for one season.

Feller expressed disappointment in the outcome of his barnstorming tour. He said however, "we did well in Mexico and found young Mexicans extremely baseball conscious."

FINDLAY RETURNS HOME TO DUMP ADRIAN 27-13

FINDLAY, O., Nov. 12—Findlay college returned home today with its eighth win of the year, a 27 to 13 victory over Adrian.

The Oilers made the breaks count, and led 21 to 0 in the final period before Adrian scored two fast touchdowns.

Ed Susteric, Findlay back ran 65 yards off tackle to ice the game with a two touchdown lead.

Adrian manufactured its touchdowns on a long run and an intercepted pass.

FESLER REMINDS BUCKS ILLINOIS IS TOUGH CLUB

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12—Wes Fesler sent his Ohio State Buckeyes through practice sessions today with the warning that Illinois will be tough this Saturday.

Word from Champaign was that Illinois mentor Ray Eliot has warned his gridders that the Buckeyes could very well pull one out of the bag this weekend.

Eliot reportedly told his squad that "Ohio will be ready for us this Saturday." He pointed out that the after-game-time victory of the Buckeyes over Northwestern last week will help key the Buckeyes to a high pitch.

Fesler meanwhile was hampered by injuries. It was hoped, however, that Joe Whisler and Pete Perini may be able to play against the Illini but Alex Verdova is definitely out of the homecoming contest.

CHAPPUIS BACK AT HEAD OF BIG NINE GAINERS

CHICAGO, Nov. 12—Robert Chappuis, the mad, mad thing who runs, passes and deals deception for Michigan, was back where he belonged today—at the top of the list in total offense for Big Nine football.

Chappuis led the Western Conference in combined running and passing last year, and now, in four games this season he has regained his position of eminence with 197 yards gained running and 337 passing for a total of 534 in four games.

Wisconsin's Lisle Blackburn and Bump Elliott of Michigan now have tied Northwestern's

This winter, more gas than ever before will go into our lines from the enormous fields of supply in the Southwest. Even so, it will be necessary to restrict your uses of gas in periods of extreme cold weather. Such gas as you can save now means more for this winter . . . But brighter days are ahead! There'll be more gas, and we hope enough, as scarce materials become available to increase the capacity of the Big Inch and Tennessee lines from the southwest.

FINDLAY RETURNS HOME TO DUMP ADRIAN 27-13

FINDLAY, O., Nov. 12—Findlay college returned home today with its eighth win of the year, a 27 to 13 victory over Adrian college of Michigan.

The Oilers made the breaks count, and led 21 to 0 in the final period before Adrian scored two fast touchdowns.

Ed Susterie, Findlay back ran 65 yards off tackle to ice the game with a two touchdown lead.

Adrian manufactured its touchdowns on a long run and an intercepted pass.

FESLER REMINDS BUCKS ILLINOIS IS TOUGH CLUB

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12—Wes Fesler sent his Ohio State Buckeyes through practice sessions today with the warning that Illinois will be tough this Saturday.

Word from Champaign was that Illini mentor Ray Eliot has warned his gridders that the Buckeyes could very well pull one out of the bag this weekend.

Eliot reportedly told his squad that "Ohio will be ready for us this Saturday." He pointed out that the after-game-time victory of the Buckeyes over Northwestern last week will help key the Buckeyes to a high pitch.

Fesler meanwhile was hampered by injuries. It was hoped, however, that Joe Whisler and Pete Perini may be able to play against the Illini but Alex Verdova is definitely out of the homecoming contest.

CHAPPUIS BACK AT HEAD OF BIG NINE GAINERS

CHICAGO, Nov. 12—Robert Chappuis, the mad, mad thing who runs, passes and deals deception for Michigan, was back where he belonged today—at the top of the list in total offense for Big Nine football.

Chappuis led the Western Conference in combined running and passing last year, and now, in four games this season he has regained his position of eminence with 197 yards gained running and 357 passing for a total of 554 in four games.

Purdue Halfback Harry Szulborski, with only one conference game left to play, still leads in rushing while Perry Moss of Illinois, the short-toss smartie, retains his control of the passing race.

Wisconsin's Lisle Blackburn and Bump Elliott of Michigan now have tied Northwestern's

More gas than ever before from the Southwest but still not enough!

This winter, more gas than ever before will go into our lines from the enormous fields of supply in the Southwest. Even so, it will be necessary to restrict your uses of gas in periods of extreme cold weather. Such gas as you can save now means more for this winter . . . But brighter days are ahead! There'll be more gas, and we hope enough, as scarce materials become available to increase the capacity of the Big Inch and Tennessee lines from the southwest.

Dix Davis, 20-year-old radio and screen actor who plays "Randolph" on NBC's Tuesday night "A Date With Judy," is a senior at the University of Southern California. A hitch in the Army prevented his graduation last year. Dix began his professional career in 1934, playing a role in the United Artists production of "Kid Millions." His first radio show was in 1939 with Rudy Vallee and Lionel Barrymore.

NBC's Bob Hawk, whose comedy quiz is heard via NBC Thursday nights, has been elected Librarian of the Lambs, an organization composed, mostly, of persons connected with the entertainment industry. Actor Bert Lytell is the new Shepherd. Bobby Clark is corresponding secretary and James E. Meighan Sr. was elected treasurer.

Still barely mike-high, Donna Jean, star of WLW's "Circle Arrow Show" and "Midwestern Hayride" has been behind a microphone since she was six years old.

Alice Faye, the feminine half of NBC's "Bandwagon" program, is a native New Yorker who always wanted to go on the stage and clicked in Hollywood after singing with Rudy Vallee's band.

NBC's "Life of Riley" will be on the screens of the nation's movie houses soon. Universal-International has purchased the show for filming.

NBC's Portland, heard on the "Fred Allen Show" and wife of the star, was named for her home town of Portland, Oregon.

Walter Tetley, who portrays "Leroy" on NBC's "The Great Gildersleeve," recently was busy between "Gildersleeve" rehearsals doing the voice for another "Andy Pandy" cartoon. Wally Fowler, leader, arranger and baritone with the popular Oak Ridge Quartet on the NBC "Grand Ole Opry," has 75 published songs to his credit, many of them hits, and about 300 other compositions in various stages of development.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

STEP BY STEP COUNTING

MOST card-counting by a fine player is progressive. He gets his information bit by bit and so does his counting of the opponent's suit lengths step by step. Eventually, when he is pretty sure he has the vital hand counted, he proceeds with a plan calculated to make the most valuable use of his knowledge. The player who will not exert his brain muscles on such a procedure may get the same result by a fortunate guess, but he also will occasionally fumble his opportunity by guessing wrong.

♠ 9 5 4	♥ A K 6 2	♦ K Q 8 5	♣ A J
♠ Q J 7 2	♥ 10 8 3	♦ J 10	♣ 10 8 7 4
None	♠ 9 7 6 4	♥ 3 2	♦ 9 6 5
♠ A K 10 6 3	♥ Q 5	♦ A	♣ K Q 3 2

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♥	Pass
3♠	Pass	4♥	Pass
5♠	Pass	6♠

That bidding was none too adroit. The average player with North's hand would have followed the 5-Hearts, showing two aces in response to the Blackwood 4-No Trumps, with 5-No Trumps to ask about kings, and then might have stuck the side into 7-No Trumps, a very nasty contract as it developed. The cinch slam contract would have been 6-No Trumps, at which twelve tricks could be run, whereas the 6-Spades proved tough.

West refrained from doubling because he expected to get two tricks with spades as the contract. He led the club 4 to the A. South tried the spade 4 to the A, and East's diamond discard showed what he was up against. He had just one possible play for it, a throw-in, which necessitated his counting West's hand. From the club 4 lead, he ruffed West now with four in each black suit, therefore five red cards. How many were hearts, and how many diamonds? His diamond A brought the 10.

Now, he reckoned, if that was a singleton, West would have held four hearts, in which case a lead of the major suit probably would have been preferred to clubs. So West must have the diamond J too, and three hearts. Paralleling that count, he proceeded to play. He scored the heart Q, club J, ruffed the diamond 8, took the heart K, ruffed the heart 6, scored the club K and Q, and retained only the spade K-10-8. He led the 8. West got it with the J, then had to lead from the Q-7 into the K-10. Note that if South had guessed West's distribution wrongly, a ruff would have beaten the contract.

Tomorrow's Problem

♠ 9 3 2	♥ A 8	♦ K Q 10 9 5	♣ 8 7 3
♠ K Q J	♥ 8 4	♦ J 7 3 2	♣ 7 3
None	♠ 10 7	♥ 10 5	♦ 8 6 4
♠ A K J 10	♥ 8 6 4	♦ A J 2	♣ Q 9 6 2

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

What defensive play will doom South's No Trump game on this deal?

HE HAS studied extensively in the field of music under several eminent teachers including Herbert Witherspoon, Louis Graveure, Douglas Stanley, John Tindley Williamson, Graham Reed and Basil Kibalschick, and he received his bachelor of music degree from the Chicago Musical College.

The principal speaker at the Silver Anniversary program, Sunday night, will be the Rev. Oscar Smith, pastor of the Hope Lutheran church, Dayton, who is a classmate and

STRIKE HALTS 85 PERCENT OF COLUMBUS VANS

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12—Columbus was without 85 per cent of its moving vans today and there was no immediate indication when the van owners and the AFL truck drivers union local might get together to discuss the shutdown.

U. S. Conciliator H. J. Montoney said no meetings have been scheduled between representatives of the union and the Columbus van owners' association. Montoney sat in on negotiations between the parties during October.

The union said it had struck one of the moving companies, the Trowbridge storage company, and charged the other five firms had called a "lock-out" against the union.

Bert Moore, president of the owners' association, claimed, however, that when the union "struck one party to the negotiations, we construed the strike as being against all of the members."

Sixty truck drivers, helpers, warehousemen and packers are involved. Union spokesmen said they were asking a $1.25-an-hour rate. Now, received, according to the union, is a 70 to 90 cent an hour rate.

Parking Lot Murder

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12—Detroit police began questioning today of a possible suspect in the $500,000 robbery at the Mounds club in Ohio Lake county last Sept. 29.

Cleveland police were notified by Detroit authorities last night that they were holding 31-year-old Sam Borri, ex-convict who has served terms in Michigan prisons, and were searching for two other possible suspects.

Detective Lieut. David E. Kerr, head of the Cleveland homicide squad, said he also would question the Detroit suspect concerning the parking lot murder of Ira Hudlin Aug. 7.

Detroit police reported that they found a black mask with the number one labeled on it, and three money bags in Borri's car. A plastic match case lettered "Souvenir of Cleveland" also led the authorities to suspect Borri as one of the 14-man gang that invaded the swank Mounds club.

Lake County Sheriff James Moloney said that he doubted that the mask found in the sus-

Frozen Food Locker Week —Nationwide

This week, November 10-15, 1947, locker plants throughout the country are celebrating. The locker industry has been firmly built. It has grown tremendously. And that's reason enough to celebrate.

But we're happy for another reason, too. We know we've been able to help in America's Food Saving Program!

You—our patrons—have realized this all along. By using the frozen food locker method of food preservation, you've been able to use locally grown foods, goods produced in your own garden. And because of this, it has been unnecessary to delve into the Nation's marketable food supplies. At the same time, you've been able to save money—and eat better—and we've all made the best use of our local surpluses.

In America today, over 4,000,000 thrifty families are patrons of over 9,000 locker plants. Each of these families is helping tackle this food problem with its worldwide significance. More plants, more patrons every day are proving the value of the "locker way."

You—our patrons—are to be congratulated for pioneering in better living through better eating. Let's continue talking over our food plans together—for you and your friends. It's worth it!
